ונפש כי תקfib קרבן מנהה לה' סלת יהוה קרבנו ... והרים הכהן מן המנהה את אוכראה וגוי' (ב-אמ')

The chasuna was that very evening and the families of the chosson and kallah were ecstatic to learn that the Tchebiner Rosh Yeshiva, R' Avraham Genichovsky zt"l, had agreed to come to Bnei Brak to be mesader kiddushin. They had asked but were unsure if he was really coming due to his heavy schedule. The Rosh Yeshivah arrived but they knew he needed to get home right after the chupah to prepare for his shiur the next day. Immediately after the chupah had concluded, the Rosh Yeshivah wished the families well, as a small crowd of people accompanied him to the taxi stand that was outside the wedding hall. There was a bus stop right next to the line of taxis, and a bus was pulling in to discharge passengers.

R' Avraham's eyes quickly scanned the bus windows, and he suddenly stopped short. "I must take the bus home," he said to those next to him. The people around him protested. "But Rebbie, the chosson's father is paying for you to get a cab to take you home right away. It's so much faster and more comfortable! And much less time-consuming."

"No, no, I'll be fine," said R' Avraham. "I must get on this bus. Thank you anyway."

To the surprise of everyone around him, the venerable Rosh Yeshivah left them all standing on the street and alighted the bus with such purpose that it seemed as if there was someone or something on that bus he just had to see.

In typical fashion, the bus was packed, but all recognized the great Rav and rose for him, offering their seats. He politely declined, and made a beeline to the one set of seats where the sole occupant had paid him no attention. It was Yankel, known throughout Bnei Brak as a man with severe psychological problems and poor personal hygiene. Yankel had no family or friends, and was cantankerous and nasty to anyone who approached him. R' Avraham, who obviously had seen Yankel from the street, approached him carefully. Yankel took up one seat, and had an assortment of plastic bags that spilled over onto the other seat. People were cringing at what Yankel might say, and a young man approached the Rosh Yeshivah and pleaded with him to take his seat. "Not for a million dollars," whispered the rabbi with a smile and turned to face the man in the seat.

"Yankel," said R' Avraham, very gently, standing in the aisle. "What do you want?" shouted Yankel grumpily.

"May I sit next to you?" Yankel didn't hesitate. "No! Can't you see that I'm taking up one and a half seats?"

People were ready to faint. What a humiliation for one of the great Roshei Yeshivah in Israel! Someone got up to intervene, but R' Avraham raised his hands and smiled again. "In that case Yankel, perhaps you'll let me squeeze into just half a seat?"

Yankel looked up and frowned. Finally, he let out a curmudgeonly sigh that sounded like the hiss of a steam engine, and reluctantly made room on the second seat. The great Rosh Yeshivah sat down, trying hard not to take up too much room and impose on Yankel's space. Then he turned to him pleasantly. "So, Yankel, how are things going for you lately?" he asked.

"Lousy!" And, to the horror of the other passengers, Yankel unleashed a torrent of nonsense and profanities to the rabbi.

R' Avraham turned to Yankel, who was red-faced by now, and said, "Yankel, I'm terribly sorry that you're having a bad day, but I need to close my eyes for a little while. I may fall asleep, but you can wake me if I miss anything important."

The Rav closed his eyes, and Yankel's stream of obscenities ground to a halt. Yankel felt he should stop, since the rabbi's eyes were closed. With nothing else to do, Yankel turned to look out the window.

Ten minutes later R' Avraham opened his eyes and noticed he was nearing his home. He turned to Yankel and said, "My stop is coming up next, so I have to go."

He gave Yankel a little hug and said, "Yankel, it was so enjoyable to see you again."

R' Avraham Genichovsky smiled and rose to go, but as he looked back at the poor, deranged man in the seat, Yankel nodded. For once in his life, he felt respected and important. Only later did the people at the wedding figure out just why the rabbi decided to take the bus. (Adapted from: The Day the Rabbi Took the Bus, and Other Stories, by Shlomo Horwitz)

ישaya HaNavi rebukes Klal Yisroel for turning away from Hashem and refraining from offering sacrifices, turning to idolatry instead. The Navi states that due to Bnei Yisroel's sins, Hashem will "profane the holy princes and deliver Yaakov to destruction and Yisroel to insults." While it is important to note that Hashem does not differentiate between the righteous and wicked when meting out punishment to a sinful generation, why is there any difference between "Yaakov" and "Yisroel" - both names for Klal Yisroel - that Hashem would destroy one while just ridiculing the other?

R' Mendel (Manny) Hirsch zt"l explains that the name "Yaakov" is perceived by the gentiles as one of might and strength - perceptions evoked from Yaakov Avinu's

אם הכהן המשיח יחטא לאשחת העם ותקריב על
הטאות אשר חטא פר בן בקר תנאים לו' לחתאת (ד-ב)

Why, if the Kohen sins, are the yidden at large guilty, as is insinuated by the words "ואשחת העם ותקריב על"? Rashi explains that the entire nation is dependent on the constant tefillos of the Kohen who davens on their behalf. And if he becomes tainted with they are guilty or in trouble. The Nesivos Hamishpat, R' Yaakov M'Lisa zt"l, further elaborates with a deeper pshat. When those in the upper echelons of our society, our Gedolim, sin, or become lax in their duties, it causes a refuah, a spiritual weakening, which trickles down to the masses. Hence that aveira will ultimately result in the entire nation becoming guilty.

The opposite holds true as well. If the leaders of Klal Yisroel are extra zealous in their divine servitude, then the entire nation will be spurred on to greater heights. Which is why the posuk says "אשר נושא קרטא" - ash'er neshia kartaa - in other words, "worthy" is the nation that its Nasi and leader takes responsibility for his actions and brings a korban. But still, we must ask: why does the Torah utilize this expression by the Nasi, and not the Kohen?

My machshava here is that the Kohen is in the Bais HaMikdash on a regular basis. He can bring his korban at any time and inconspicuously. The Nasi however, has to bring a korban in front of many others and suffer the humiliation. He has a moral nisayon. If he passes the test and brings his korban, then is takeh praiseworthy for himself and for the entire Jewish nation.

As the special Yom Tov of Pesach approaches, the time that we became the Am Hanivchar, we see the stark contrast between our leaders and the leaders of other nations who are constantly trying to cover up their misdeeds, their myriad misconducts and their vile middos. Where one puts down the other and their bickering doesn't cease. Ashreinu!

Perhaps one of the most important ideals of chinuch is to inculcate in our children the need to take responsibility for their actions. That will enable them to learn to be honest with themselves, others, and Hashem thereby giving Him much nachas.

אדם כי יקfib מכם קרבן לך' מון הבומה מון הבדך ומון החוץ ... (א-ב)

مثال: The following story was recently told over at a shiur. A man from Haifa borrowed 200 shekel from a gemach. On the day his debt was due, he had the money in his account but he was unable to access the funds due to Shmiras Einayim considerations, and he didn't want to go the nearby ATM machine to withdraw the money as it was in a place that was inappropriate. Instead, he davened to Hashem and asked Him to provide the 200 shekel another way.

Feeling a bit tired, the man went into a side room of the shul he was learning in and put his head down for a few minutes. When he awoke, there was a 200 shekel bill in the ribbon of his hat! He had no idea how it got there.

Immediately, he found the lender and paid back his debt. Then, he asked around to find out who left him the money.

ישבע אותו בכנפי לא בדריל ... (א-טרא)

In Sefer Vayikrah, there are many types of Korbanos, and ways in which we are commanded to offer them. There is the "עלת העוף" about which we are told to separate the head and the "עטלת העוף" which we are commanded NOT to separate its head. Why is this commandment necessary? The Shem M'Shmuel of Sochatchov zt"l gives us an incredible explanation. As we know, the sin for which one brings a Korban Olah is "הרהור הלב" - sinful thoughts. A Korban Chatos, on the other hand, is an atonement for unintentional sins. The difference is that when a person has "הרהור הלב", he has allowed his sinful thoughts to penetrate his heart. He literally connected his mind to his heart and allowed these thoughts to pass through.

For this reason, the Torah is very clear that with regard to an "עלת העוף", one must sever the head of the bird from its body to atone for NOT separating his own mind and heart from sin. On the other hand, a Korban Chatos is offered by one who has sinned unintentionally. This means that he DID NOT connect his mind to his heart, he was literally not thinking correctly, and he behaved improperly because he did not use his head to make the right choice. As a result, when he brings a Chatos, he must NOT separate the head because this was his whole problem in the first place! Thus, the Torah tells him "לא בידיל" - since you "severed" your own head and caused your body to sin, "Do not sever" this bird's head!

Every day, we recite the following prayer: "ז'ידעתי ה' והוא השבota אל לבבך" - which means that what we know in our minds - the Emes (truth) of Hashem and His Torah - we must not leave it as intellectual property. We must make that knowledge a part of ourselves. It must influence our behavior and our actions, so that everything we do is a result of our mind and heart uniting to perform the will of Hashem. All negative, sinful and heretical thoughts must be "separated" - blocked off from entering into our hearts. May we be blessed with the wisdom to know precisely how and when to uphold the principle of "LO YAVDIL".

CONCEPTS IN AVODAS HALEV FROM THE FAMILY OF R' CHAIM YOSEF KOFRMAN ZT"L

Rashi explains that the entire nation is dependent on the constant tefillos of the Kohen who davens on their behalf. And if he becomes tainted with they are guilty or in trouble. The Nesivos Hamishpat, R' Yaakov M'Lisa zt"l, further elaborates with a deeper pshat.

When those in the upper echelons of our society, our Gedolim, sin, or become lax in their duties, it causes a refuah, a spiritual weakening, which trickles down to the masses. Hence that aveira will ultimately result in the entire nation becoming guilty.

nation will be spurred on to greater heights. Which is why the posuk says "אשר נושא קרטא". Rashi explains the word "אשר"

- in other words, "worthy" is the nation that its Nasi and leader takes responsibility for his actions and brings a korban.

But still, we must ask: why does the Torah utilize this expression by the Nasi, and not the Kohen?

My machshava here is that the Kohen is in the Bais HaMikdash on a regular basis. He can bring his korban at any time and inconspicuously. The Nasi however, has to bring a korban in front of many others and suffer the humiliation. He has a moral nisayon. If he passes the test and brings his korban, then is takeh praiseworthy for himself and for the entire Jewish nation.

As the special Yom Tov of Pesach approaches, the time that we became the Am Hanivchar, we see the stark contrast between our leaders and the leaders of other nations who are constantly trying to cover up their misdeeds, their myriad misconducts and their vile middos. Where one puts down the other and their bickering doesn't cease. Ashreinu!

Perhaps one of the most important ideals of chinuch is to inculcate in our children the need to take responsibility for their actions. That will enable them to learn to be honest with themselves, others, and Hashem thereby giving Him much nachas.

Nobody knew. He asked the shul's Gabbai to show him the surveillance footage of that day, and together they watched as a man they had never seen before entered the side room, and placed the 200 shekel bill in his hat. Apparently, the man had a desire to give Mattan B'seser (anonymous charity) and thought he was a collector!

He saw how Hashem listens to his Tefilos!

نمלה: The term "בקר" - cattle, represents the aggressive individual. Like the proverbial bull in a china shop, this person stomps his way through life. A person needs to channel his animalistic energy and passion into holiness. This is the function of Tefillah. Prayer is the medium through which we vent our emotions and stir our passion to Hashem.

Tefillah is a battle when the soul combats the aggression and passion of the animal soul. Tefillah focuses on the greatness of Hashem and is designed to excite the soul. (Zera Baruch)
